NEW YORK HERALD, MONDAY, WOVEMERS 27, 1803.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

There was considerable speculative activity on the cock Exchange during the past week, and prices were smerally in the ascendant till Friday afternoon, when a effort was made to depress the market, and prices ecoded & a 1% per cent; but the decline was partially recovered from on Saturday. At the three o'clock open board Eric closed at 93%, New York Central 97%, Hudson River 11034, Michigan Southern 7634, Cleveland and Putsburg 22%, Northwestern 36%, preferred 66%; Fort Wayne 105%, Mariposa 14%, Cumberland 44%, Ohio and Mississippi certificates 29, Canton (b. 3) 45.

The market for railway and miscellaneous shares closed duil, but with a tendency towards improvement, and in view of the abundance of money available for stock year of the automated of a still further supply on and after the let of December in consequence of the redecaption of not far from twenty millions of five per cent notes, there is a probability of higher prices being corthe active stocks. The "tadpole" referred to will be paid on presentation at the Sub-Treasuries on Friday and the next fol-lowing days. Those sent to Washington by the holders will be paid by draft on one of the Sub-Treasuries. The interest on a large portion of the tem-porary loan falls due on the same date, and on the 15th of December $10,950,000—the half year's interest on $300,000,000 of the seven-thirty loan-will be payable. The same amount on account of another section of the same loan will be due on February 15, and $8,390,006 on January 15 on a third section. Thus the distursements of currency by the Sub-Treasury will be large for the next ten weeks, after which—namely, on the 1st of March, April and May—the remainder of the five per cent notes will mature. The amount of the latter outstanding on October 31 was $32,536,901. In addition to these a large amount of compound interest notes and certificates of in-debtedness will mature in the meantime, while the temporary lean, of which there was $59,107,745 at the date of the last statement of the public debt, is liable to be drawn upon at uncertain intervals—twenty-live millions of the amount, in the form of Clearing House cornilicates, being payable at sight and the remainder after ten days' notice. It is therefore obvious that the Treasury is dependent to a great extent upon an easy condition of the money market for the payment of ewn maturing obligations without embarrassment, and that contraction under such circumstances, if practicable at all, would be indiscreet and probably disastrous. Supposing, however, another conversion loan of fifty millions to be offered, the legal tender notes to be taken at par with accrued interest and the bonds (five twenties) to be offered at par; what would be the result? Why, simply that not a dollar would be subscribed. Yet the fifty millions already funded were subscribed for bonds at 103. The new issue was then selling at 103½, with four months and a half of accumulated interest. The same issue sold yesterday at 99¾. This is one of the effects of increasing the funded debt, and as every fresh in rease would proportionately depreciate the entire mass it is questionable whether a new conversion loan would be taken up at a price above 90 for the bonds. Those who subscribed to the late conversion loan are of course losers by the operation, and some of them have not yet received the bonds to which they are entitled. For this, in consideration of the deprenation which they have undergone since a reasonable time clapsed after the closing of the subscription beeks for their delivery, they have a claim for compensation. Moreover, the decline of government securities makes a further fall by selling out, while it excites apprehenrions among the holders abroad which are calculated to induce similar results. And it must be remembered that a return flow of our bonds from Europe would exert a serious influence in advancing the sold pre-miam and the rates of foreign exchange. But these and other dangers which attend a forced and therefore mischievous contraction at a time when the bas s of the public credit is public considence, and when the country is recovering from the effects of an exhausting war, may be avoided by leaving the currency alone till the country, and consequently the government, is strong enough to bear contraction with safety. It will be enough if, during the next three years, the Secretary of the Treasury succeeds in preventing the currency from rising above its present value. The national bank issues are adding nearly four millions per week to it, and the redemption of the remaining two bundred millions and more of mert interest bearing currency will be the more exchange of inactive for active paper money. Many will sell "chort" on the Stock Exchange in anticipation of the measures the Treasury may recommend and Con-gress may adopt; but those who look for radical mea-earth without seeing that our revenue would be reduced to comparative insignificance, and the commerce and enterprise of the nation prostrated by them, are shortsignted indeed. The probabilities, therefore, are in layor of a highly conservative financial policy being pursued, which will disappoint both the radical contrac-tionists and these who base their calculations upon their investors at home timid and desirous of guarding against

FIFTER MILLION DOLLARS INVOLVED.

[From the St. Louis Republican, Nov. 24.7]

From a gentleman who has just arrived from Mobile we get some information in relation to cotton transactions in Alabama that may be considered startling even in these days of wholesale frands and rogneries.

Soon after the surrender of Mobile it became evident that sharpers were at full work in that vicinity. A supervising agent, Mr. W. P. Muller, arrived there not long ago and instituted an investigation. It was a hurried and supervising agent, and at all events resulted in no disclosures of malpractices on the part of sub-agents and their assistants. The President, desiring a closer senting, soon afterwards sent down Colonel J. R. Tomeny, and this gentleman, conjointly with Major General Wood, who is in command there, began a more thorough search into the matter. They soon "struck ile" in the case of a local agent named Carver, and he was sentenced to one year's imprisonment and to restore $90,000 in money which was adjudged to belong to the United States. General Wood promised to remit the sentence (if, in a given time, he would pay over the money. Carver complied with this condition and saved himself from the first part of the sentence.

The investigation was still in progress when our informant left Mobile, and interesting and important developments were being made daily. Enough had been done by those who were prosecuting it to enable them to foot in roughly this amazing grand total, namely, in the other contents are superprinted by official and non-official roscals and sharpers.
